It is hard to imagine a day without them:

- many times unnoticed and completely taken for granted
- no matter how busy, never a harsh word for anyone
- a general concern for students, teachers and the many new faces encountered each day
- friendly smiles, always helpful, ever present . . .

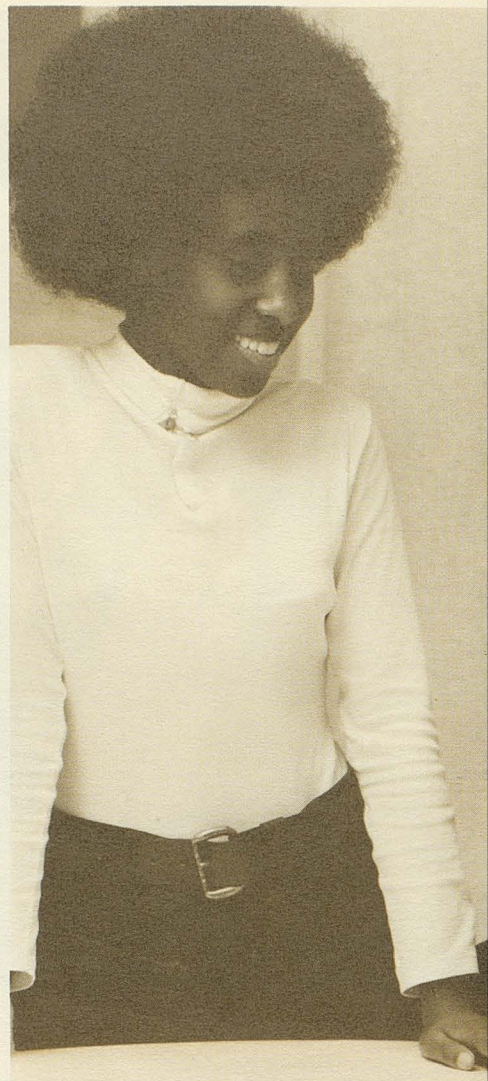

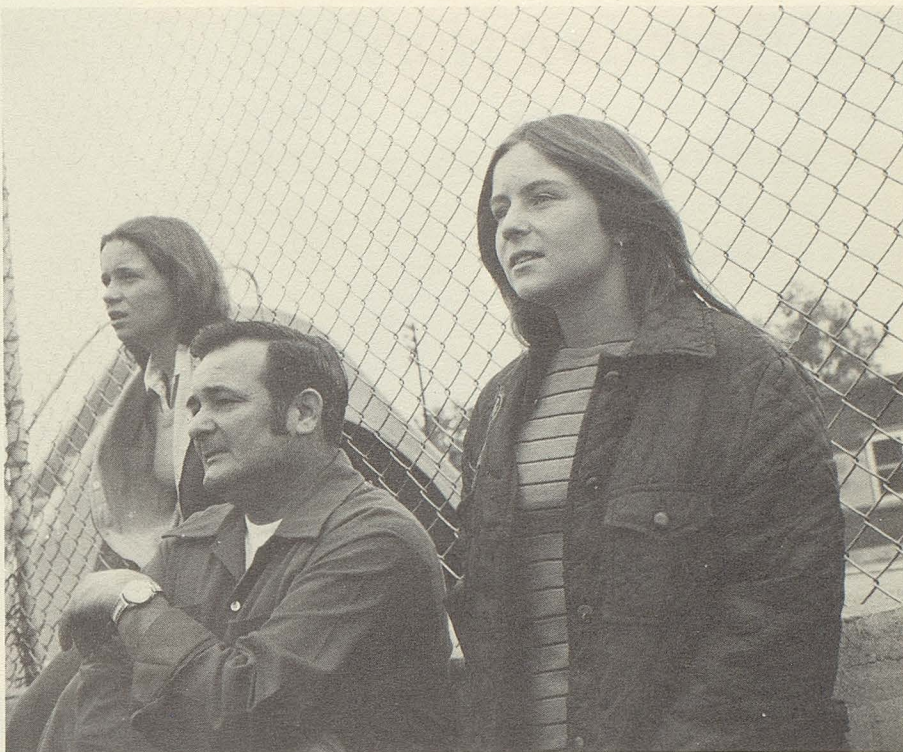

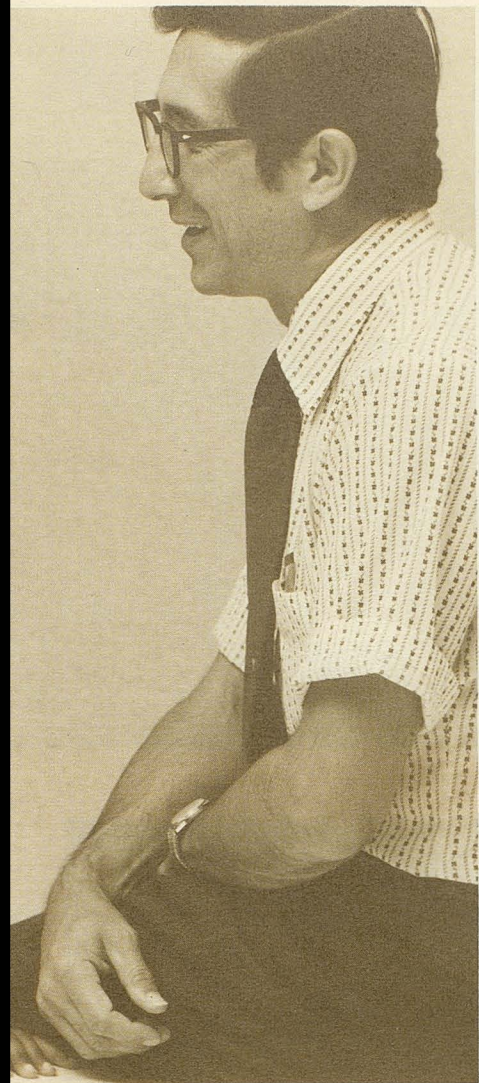

So often we benefit — so seldom do we acknowledge the simple things that are done for us:

- the small crises that are solved with telephone calls
- recovery of forgotten lunches
- the loan of a much needed stapler, paper clip, rubber band . . .

For all the times we forgot to say it; thank you Miss FitzGerald and Mrs. Perry

Fetlework Captures Our Hearts

Being away from home and living in a different country is certainly a difficult and interesting experience. The way of life in Ethiopia is quite different from the life in the United States. I had a pretty hard time in adjusting my life to the new surroundings.

I wasn't surprised when I got to see the changes here since I expected to find so many different things. The one thing that I didn't expect was the weather.

When I first went to school, I had a little difficulty in understanding the pupils. But, this problem didn't last very long.

Before I came to the United States, I heard many different things about it. I tried to forget everything I had heard because I wanted to find out what the real things in the country are. Of course, I noticed many things are different from what I had heard.

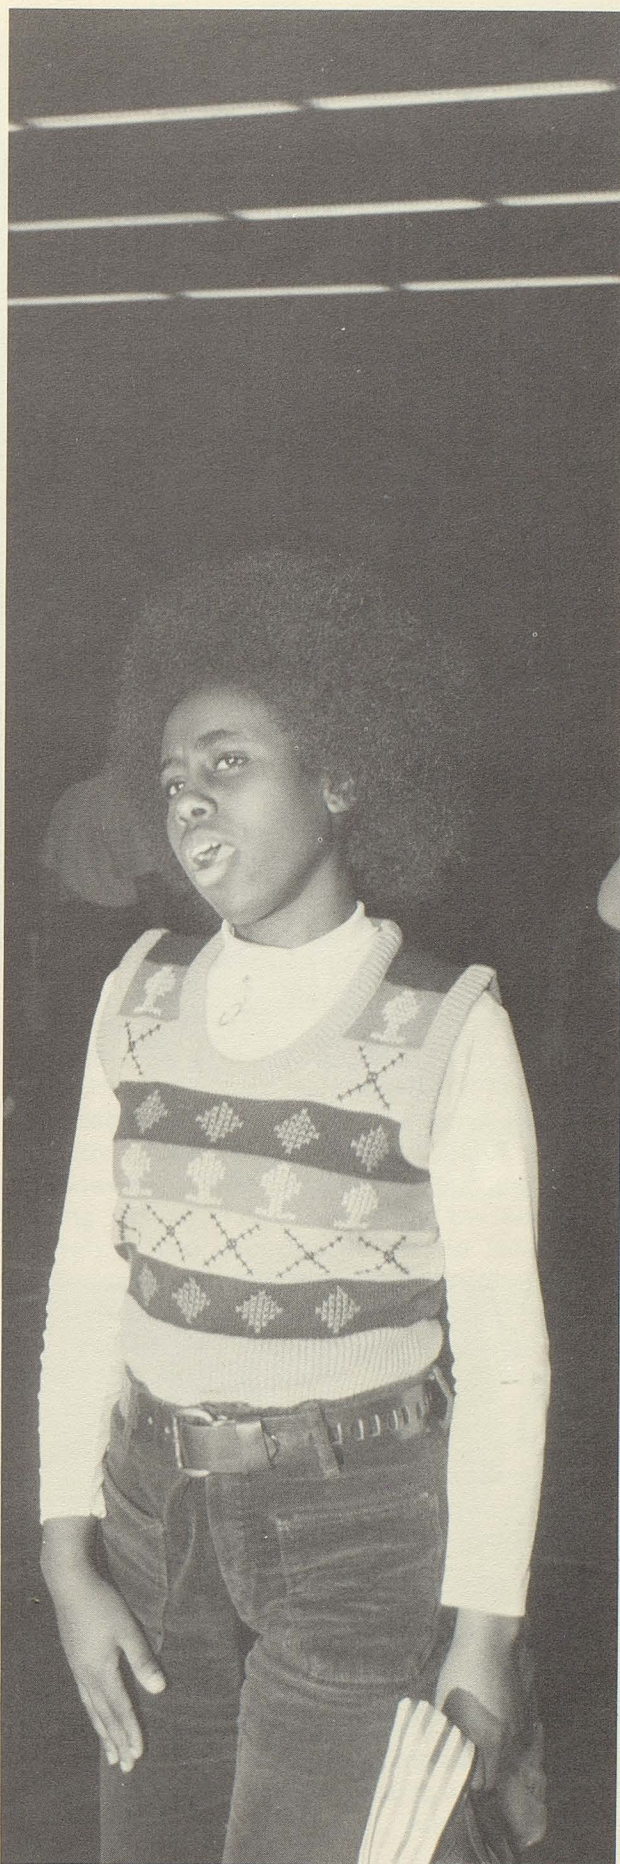

My first impression of the United States is the people. How nice it is living with such sociable people. I can say that most of my problems are solved by the people here.

I think living with the different families helped my experience a lot. I realized even two families in the same country vary in many ways. Generally speaking, it was after Christmas when I found most things more interesting.

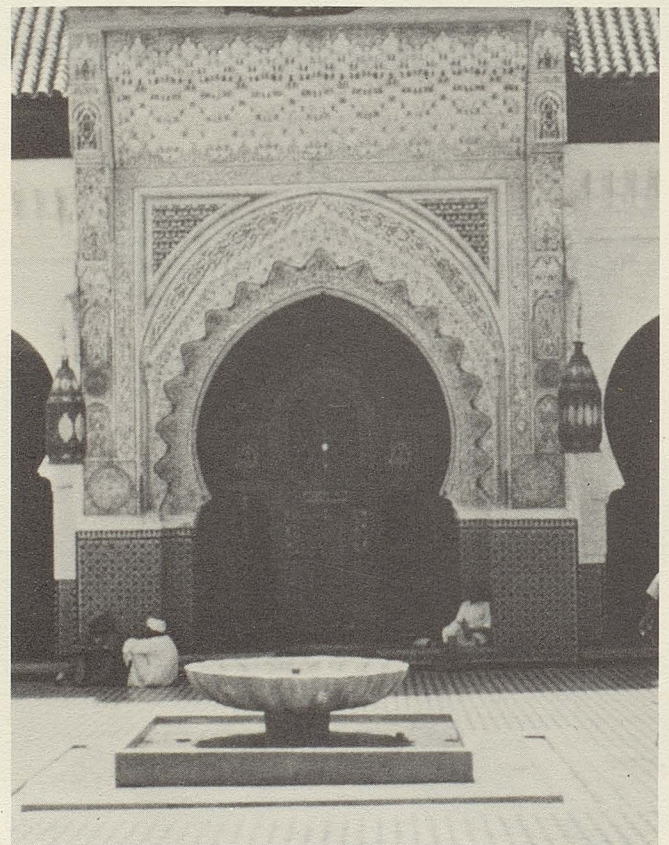

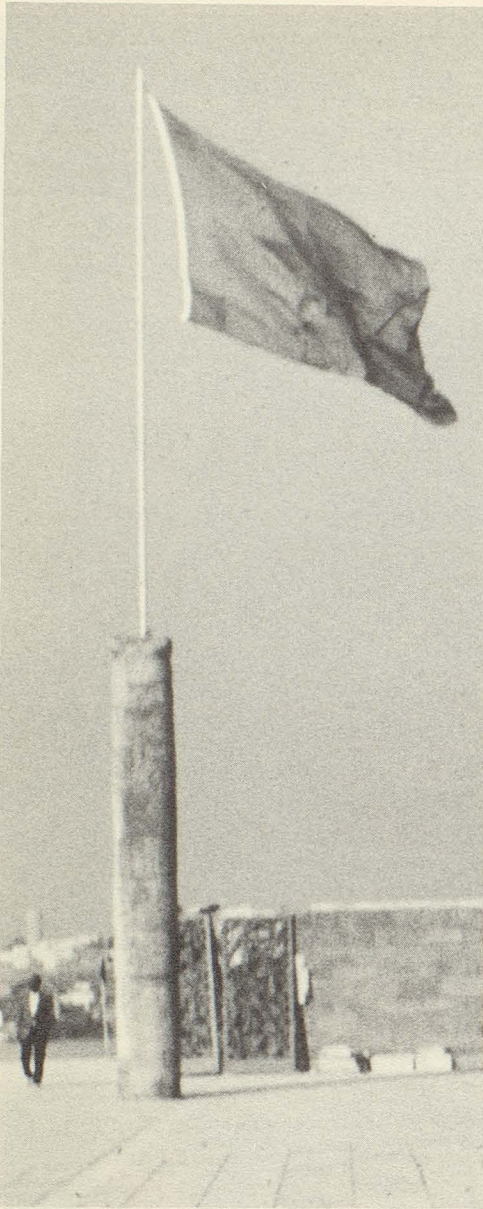

It is very nice for the AFS to give students opportunities of learning about different countries. I hope my experience in the United States will help me in my future life.

Ann Goes to Morocco

This past summer, I spent ten weeks with the Amrani family in Fes Morocco, North Africa. Adapting to a new society (pace of life, food, clothes, customs, and language) is indeed a rewarding and enlightening experience.

Since Morocco is a male dominated society, it was an asset having a host brother. Najib was an eager, young student, and a bit more broadminded than most girls. This gave me a chance to see and experience more.

Because Morocco is an underdeveloped and uneducated country, everything is based on TRADITION! Life is a bit slower there. People don't concentrate on being places on time. Everything is relaxed. From noon until 4:00 p.m., all work stops. The people rest in the 120 degree heat, then resume work until late at night. The food is very basic, consisting of brown bread, semolina, melons, and mint tea, the national drink.

In my journeys, I found that the people were most hospitable, warm, happy, and friendly. This was good, and eased a newcomer. However, at times, they were so hospitable that they would get offended easily, (like not taking a glass of tea). Again, this reflects the tradition.

Although Morocco is now independent, they have several troubles. There are beggars lining the streets, poor getting poorer, and rich getting richer.

However, there were the lighter times too. I had my first experience at a hamem, (an old lady thought I was deaf and dumb, so she bowed to Allah to give me speech and hearing. Actually, I hadn't mastered the language yet). I also experienced getting lost while mountain climbing, and having misunderstandings to a culture clash. Through all this I learned more from my many mistakes; I came back with a different perspective about the world and my surroundings. I learned to appreciate my community, and especially my family for all they have given me.

Mohammed Najib Joutey Amrani was my host brother. We grew to be very close. He was the only one who spoke English. He was very intelligent. Najib was a very good gymnast, and a conscientious worker. I think he knew more about the U.S. than I. Najib was interested in my welfare, however he was not dominating. He let me see the good and the bad aspects of his country.

In Memory of:

Kevin Eugene White, who died September 2, 1973. Kevin enjoyed life, and tried to make the best of it. He enjoyed being with people, and people enjoyed being with him; especially his "park friends" and his fellow students.

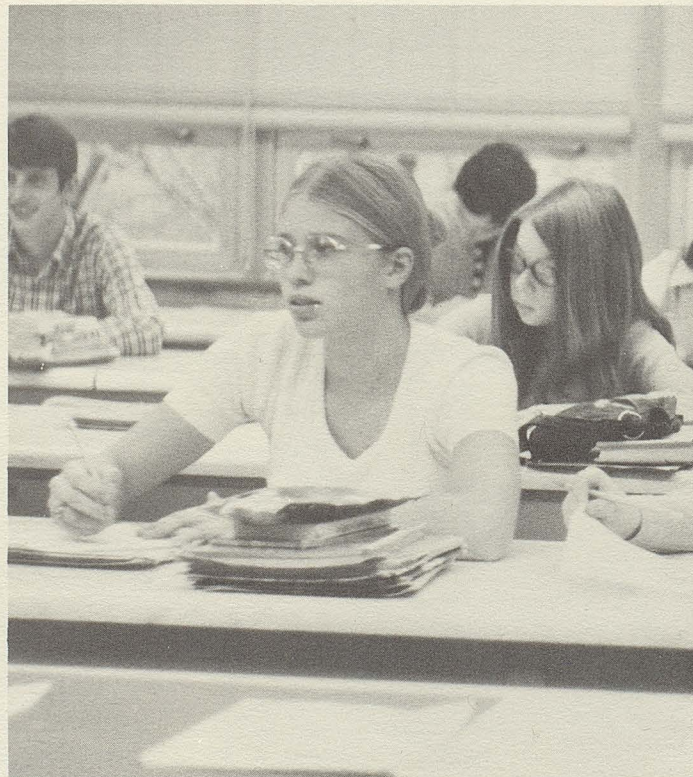

Although Kevin is gone, he will always live within our hearts.

Afterword

The main concern of the editors of the Maple Leaf this year was originality. With the diligent assistance of our staff members, we have put together a yearbook which we feel reflects upon one of the most important and challenging stages of our lives.

A multitude of happy, unforgettable, and sometimes embarrassing memories were compiled to construct the '74 Maple Leaf. Without the continuous guidance and dedication of our advisor, Mr. Besig, this yearbook would have been just an idea.

Countless hours and unlimited patience were mandatory from all, for meeting deadlines and accomplishing our goal of "putting it all together".
